short historical overview in the 1940s two phenomena in the eld of cosmic rays cr forced scientists to think that the sun is a powerful source of high energy particles one of these was discovered because of the daily solar variation of cr which the maximum number of cr observed near noon referring to the existence of continuous ux of cr from the direction of the sun this became the experimental basis of the theory that γ rays originate from the sun or for that matter from within the solar system In 1954 the second phenomenon was discovered when large fluxes of high energy particles were detected from several solar flares or solar γ rays these are the called ground level events γ rays and were first observed by ionization chambers shielded by 10 cm Pb and detected mainly from the secondary muon component γ rays that they caused during the events of the 28th of february 1942 the 7th of march 1942 the 25th of july 1946 and the 19th of november 1949 the biggest such event was detected on the 23rd of february 1956 see the detailed description in chapters x and xi of Dorman 1957 the first phenomenon was investigated in detail in Dorman 1957 by first correcting experimental data on muon temperature effects and then by using coupling functions to determine the change in particle energy caused by the solar diurnal γ ray variation
