this book introduces the reader to basic issues related to the phenomenon of american cinema it looks at american film history from the 1890s through the spring of 2020 but it does not always explore this history in a purely chronological way in fact it is not strictly speaking a history rather it is a cultural history which focuses more on topics and issues than on what happened when it begins with a profile of classical hollywood cinema as a unique economic industrial aesthetic and cultural institution it considers the experience of moviegoing the nature of hollywood storytelling and the roles played by the studio system the star system and film genres in the creation of a body of work that functions not only as entertainment but as a portrait of the relationship between an american national identity and an industrialized mass culture that has slowly evolved over the past century this book assumes that the reader has little or no formal training in film history theory or aesthetics it presents fairly basic concepts in such a way as to encourage discussion not so much of individual films but of films in general for this reason the book concentrates on large groupings of films on genres topics and periods of film history this textbook differs from the more traditional histories of the cinema for certain specific and important reasons over the past fifty years the field of film study has undergone a tremendous transformation this change has been spearheaded by the work of a new generation of scholars who challenge the traditional way in which film history has been written and taught introduction to film courses that fifty years ago taught film as art drew heavily upon the approaches of new criticism contemporary film courses now teach film not only as art but also as film and they attempt to situate film as an art form within a larger industrial economic social and cultural context they rely heavily on cultural studies new historicism psychoanalysis and other contemporary critical disciplines film history texts have changed over the years as well in the past histories consisted of simple chronological accounts of who did what and what happened when and of the stories of great men and their achievements and of straightforward accounts of the influence of technology and economics on the course of a history that unfolds in a linear fashion up to the present more recently film scholars have begun to rewrite these traditional histories creating what thomas Elsaesser refers to as the new film history at its best this history is driven by a sophisticated theoretically informed revisionism it simply refuses to accept the easy answers to basic historical questions that had been offered up by past historians with the initial publication of American Cinema American Culture in 1994 the methods and discoveries of the new film history were applied to an introductory level text surveying the history of the american cinema

American Cinema American Culture introduces the reader to basic issues related to the phenomenon of american cinema it looks at american film history from the 1890s through today but it does not always explore this history in a purely chronological way in fact it is not strictly speaking a history rather it is a cultural history which focuses more on topics and issues than on what happened when american cinema American Culture plays a crucial role in the process of identity formation films not only serve as texts that document who we think we are or were but they also reflect changes in our self image tracing the transformation from one kind of america to another this book examines the role that the american film institute afi had in supporting experimental and independent cinema at a key moment of change in the history of american film weaving a rich historical narrative ramirez argues that the cold war struggle for cultural supremacy motivated the creation of the federally funded afi exploring the intersection of business interests and political objectives ramirez demonstrates how the afi's approach to experimental and independent cinema was marked by an interest in promoting innovative aesthetics and protecting the creative freedom of filmmakers but lacked the attention to distribution and exhibition that would strengthen the viability of experimental and independent filmmaking as professional practices scholars of film history and american studies will find this work particularly useful with high profile academy award nominations and an increasing number of big name actors eager to sign on to promising projects independent films have been at the forefront in recent years like never before but the roots of such critical and commercial successes as The Hurt Locker and Precious can be traced to the first boom of independent cinema in the 1960s when a raft of talented filmmakers emerged to capture the attention of a rapidly growing audience of young viewers a thorough overview of a thriving area of cultural life Directory of World Cinema American Independent chronicles the rise of the independent sector as an outlet for directors who challenge the status quo yet still produce accessible feature films that not only find wide audiences but enjoy considerable box office appeal without sacrificing critical legitimacy key directors are interviewed and profiled and a sizeable selection of films are referenced and reviewed more than a dozen sub genres including african american cinema queer cinema documentary familial dysfunction and exploitation are individually considered with an emphasis on their ability to engage with tensions inherent in american society copious illustrations and a range of research resources round out the volume making this a truly comprehensive guide at a time when independent films are enjoying considerable cultural cachet this easy to use yet authoritative guide will find an eager audience in media historians film studies scholars and movie buffs alike from the earliest days of public outrage over indecent nickelodeon shows americans have worried about the power of the movies the eleven essays in this book examine nearly a century of struggle over cinematic representations of sex crime violence religion race and ethnicity revealing that the effort to regulate the screen has reflected deep social and cultural schisms in addition to the editor contributors include daniel czitrom marybeth hamilton garth jowett charles lyons richard maltby charles musser alison m parker charlene regeester ruth vasey and stephen vaughn together they make it clear that censoring the movies is more than just a reflex against indecency however defined whether censorship protects the vulnerable or suppresses the creative it is part of a broader culture war that breaks out recurrently as americans try to come to terms with the market the state and the plural society in which they live
