peace settlements and political transformation in divided societies examines what happened to northern ireland and south africa after their miraculous political settlements in the 1990s in which comparison between the two cases played a small but significant role the author extends the story by exploring the connections between these two deeply divided societies during the consolidation of their settlements he shows the ways in which their paths have subsequently diverged in both reality and perception at the outset of the transformation of the two polities the similarities between the two cases tended to be overstated in this context the book explains how the south african case came to be misidentified as an example of consociationalism and the influence that this has continued to exert on comparative studies of power sharing in the process other aspects of south africa s political transformation including respect for the constitution and the rule of law have been overlooked and underappreciated in the case of northern ireland a missing element in the treatment of its settlement as a model for other deeply divided societies has been the role that external mediation played in the creation and survival of its institutions northern ireland s dependence on favourable external circumstances explains in large part why the good friday agreement is now facing a threat to its survival by contrast south africa s political institutions seem relatively secure despite the vast scale of the country s socio economic problems this book will be of interest to students researchers and scholars of conflict resolution and peace processes comparative politics ethnic politics and democratisation as well as those involved in the governance of deeply divided societies
