first published in 1999 this international collection of essays on legal education addresses the following issues the law school and the university research into legal education has often been regarded as a marginal activity as compared with research into substantive areas of law however recent years have seen a growing interest in discussions about the purpose of the university law school and the ways in which law is taught within it are we educating professional lawyers or legal scholars what do we really mean when we say we want to offer a liberal education in the law what effect are the current changes in higher education funding and policy having on law schools and what takes place within them the international group of scholars who have contributed to this collection come from very different jurisdictions but they have written about topics which while they have local resonances are of concern globally global issues local questions addresses matters which concern all law teachers whatever their field of substantive legal expertise this book discusses the opportunities and challenges facing legal education in the era of globalization it identifies the knowledge and skills that law students will require in order to prepare for the practice of tomorrow and explores pedagogical shifts legal education needs to make inside and outside of the classroom with contributions from leading experts on legal education from various jurisdictions across the globe the work combines theoretical depth with practical insights seeking to understand the changing landscape of legal education in the era of globalization the contributions find that law schools can and must adopt educational strategies that at least present students with different understandings of what studying and practicing law is meant to be about they find that law schools need to offer their students choices a vision of practice that is not driven entirely by the demands of the marketplace or the needs of major international law firms bridging the gap between theory and practice this book makes a significant contribution to the impact of globalization on legal education and how students and law schools need to adapt for the future it will be of great interest to academics and students of comparative legal studies and legal education as well as policy makers and practitioners there is a myth that lingers around legal education in many democracies that myth would have us believe that law students are admitted and then succeed based on raw merit and that law schools are neutral settings in which professors also selected and promoted based on merit use their expertise to train those students to become lawyers based on original empirical research this book investigates this myth from myriad perspectives diverse settings and in different nations revealing that hierarchies of power and cultural norms shape and maintain inequities in legal education embedded within law school cultures are assumptions that also stymie efforts at reform the book examines hidden pedagogical messages showing how presumptions about theory's relation to practice are refracted through the obfuscating lens of curricula the contributors also tackle questions of class and market as they affect law training finally this collection examines how structural barriers replicate injustice even within institutions representing themselves as democratic and open revealing common dynamics across cultural and institutional forms the chapters speak to similar issues and to one another about the influence of context images of law and lawyers the political economy of legal education and the agency of students and faculty legal education systems like legal systems themselves were framed across asia without exception according to foreign models these reflect the vestiges of colonialism and can be said to amount to imitating the style and purposes of legal education typical in western and relatively pure common law and civilian systems today however we see asian legal education coming into its own and beginning to accept responsibility for designing curricula and approaches that fit the region's particular needs this book explores how conventional transplanted approaches as regards program design as well as modes of teaching are or are on the cusp of being reimagined and discerns emerging home grown traces of innovation replacing imitation in countries and universities across east asia this collection brings together a distinguished group of researchers to examine the power relations which are played out in university law schools as a result of the different pressures exerted upon them by a range of different stakeholders from students to governments from lawyers to universities a host of institutions and actors believe that law schools should take account of a vast number of often conflicting considerations when teaching their students designing curricula carrying out research and so on how do law schools deal with these pressures what should their response be to the stakeholders who urge them to follow agendas emanating from outside the law school itself to what extent should some of these agendas play a greater role in the thinking of law schools law by its very nature tends to think locally not globally this book has a broader scope in terms of the range of nations and offers a succinct journey through law schools on different continents and subject matters it covers education research impact and societal outreach and governance it illustrates that law schools throughout the world have much in common in terms of values duties challenges ambitions and hopes it provides insights into these aspirations whilst presenting a thought provoking discussion for a more global agenda on the future of law schools written from the perspective of a former dean the book offers a unique understanding of the challenges facing legal education and research
