this collection of articles offers a new and compelling perspective on the interface connecting syntax phonology semantics and pragmatics at the core of this volume is the hypothesis that information structure represents the common interface of these grammatical components information structure is investigated here from different theoretical viewpoints yielding typologically relevant information and structural generalizations in the volume s introductory chapter the editors identify two central approaches to information structure the formal and the interpretive view the remainder of the book is organized accordingly the first part examines information structure and grammar concentrating on generalizations across languages the second part investigates information structure and pragmatics concentrating on clause structure and context through concrete analyses of topic focus and related phenomena across different languages the contributors add new and convincing evidence to the research on information structure the book presents a new science of semiotic linguistics the goal of semiotic linguistics is to discover what characterizes language as an intermediary between the mind and reality so that language creates the picture of reality we perceive the cornerstone of semiotic linguistics is the discovery and resolution of language antinomies contradictions between two apparently reasonable principles or laws language antinomies constitute the essence of language and hence must be studied from both linguistic and philosophical points of view the basic language antinomy which underlies all other antinomies is the antinomy between meaning and information both generative and classical linguistic theories are unaware of the need to distinguish between meaning and information by confounding these notions they are unable to discover language antinomies and confine their research to naturalistic description of superficial language phenomena rather than the quest for the essence of language series a
